New York, December 30th, 1886.

Mr. William P. Moore,

Dear Sir:

In placing my collection in your hands, to be sold at auction, I feel that my long experience in art matters justifies my saying that no finer art treasures were ever offered for sale in New York. I have personally sought for and carefully selected them throughout Europe, with no thought of ever selling them at auction, and I realize that in thus selling such costly objects I shall make large sacrifices; but the necessity which I am under of returning to Europe, compels me, at any cost, to dispose of the entire collection immediately.

I need scarcely say that the objects offered for sale are all that they are represented to be in the catalogue, and that I willingly guarantee their authenticity.

Yours truly,

P. STEVENS.
